Moral Courage. A great deal of talent is lost in the world for the want of a little courage. Every day sends to the grave a number of obscure men, who have only remained in obscurity because their timidity has prevented them from making a first effort, and who, if they could have been induced to begin, would, in all probability, have gone great lengths in fame. The fact is, to do anything to this world worth doing, we must not stand back shiverteg and thinking of the cold and the danger, but jump in and scramble through as well as we can. It will not do to be perpetually calculating tasks and adjusting nice chances; it did very we'll before the flood, where a man could consult his friends upon an intended publication for a hundred and afty years, and then live to see its success afterward.
